

Supplement Fig S4: Paralog counts in the top and bottom quartile groups in the large pool growth screen. The top group that had relatively better growth over time had greater genetic redundancy with relatively more paralogs in P. falciparum. In contrast, the bottom group with significantly fewer paralogs consequently suffered more deleterious mutations, indicating a lower number of possible gene replacements for the same function.