

Supplemental Figure S7 Basic principle of solid-phase reverse transfection. The biomolecules (DNA, siRNA or proteins) are mixed with a transfection solution and applied on a carrier surface, then dried and overlaid with mammalian cells. The cells take up the biomolecules and change their properties.