

Supplemental Figure S1. Schematic illustration of the workflow and methods used in this study.

Pairwise structural alignment was performed with each protein using TM-align. The similarity scores obtained from the alignments were used to portray the distribution of structural similarity and sequence identity, and to evaluate evolutionary conservatives at the protein structure level.